Addressing the trust deficit that has developed between the people of Afghanistan and the international community, the authors of this book grapple with key issues related to the implementation of a draw-down strategy. Their analyses and recommendations cover a broad range of topics, including Afghanistan’s security environment, governance and the rule of law, the role of civil society, development, and reconciliation and reintegration.

Wolfgang Danspeckgruber is director of the Liechtenstein Institute on Self-Determination (LISD) at Princeton University.
